Closing Day of Bourbon Fair.

The program of the Bourbon Fair was concluded Saturday afternoon, precluding a week of festivities and a most successful exhibition. Unfavorable weather which set in during the early part of the week, reduced the attendance somewhat, but even with the unfavorable conditions the Society enjoyed a liberal patronage and had under different circumstances would have broken all records in point of attendance.

The heavy downpour of rain Friday afternoon and Friday night kept hundreds away on the closing day. The sun shown brightly Saturday morning and a crowd fully up to the average for the last day was in attendance during the afternoon.

The most attractive feature of the closing day was the baby show. Eleven beautiful girl babies were entered in the contest for the premium, a handsome baby buggy, offered by Mayor J. T. Hinton, and a second prize of $5 given by Mr. J. H. Haggard.

The judges selected were Misses Mount and Gill, of Lancaster, and Mrs. Durand Whipple, of Little Rock, Ark., while the referees were Mrs. Mitchell of North Middletown, and Mrs. Roy Clendenin, of Paris.

The first premium was awarded to Dorothy Strother, aged 13 months, and the second award went to Bessie Cunningham, 13 months old. The premium awards for Saturday were as follows:

Successful Sale.

The biggest live stock sale held in Kentucky in many years were conducted last week by the J. H. Baughman Livestock Company at Stanford. The sales were scheduled to cover two days, Wednesday and Thursday, but so great was the crowd of buyers and so many were the offerings that a third day was necessary to dispose of all the stock put up and the sale was not concluded until late Friday. Altogether almost 8,000 head of cattle horses and mules were sold under the hammer by Auctioneers T. D. English and I. M. Dunn, of Danville, and a total of almost $100,000 was realized from the three days' sales. Buyers were there from all over Kentucky, Tennessee and far down in Georgia and the bidding was brisk at all times.

Kentucky Association Track Notes.

The Kentucky Association Track at Lexington is fast getting into first class condition after the recent heavy rains. The feature race of the card of the entire meeting is to be the Autumn Cup, a distance race of two and one-quarter miles. Eleven good entries have been received, and there is a possibility of others arriving to get in the contest for this rich stake. Among the horses that have been named are Countess, Sir Catesby, Console, G. N. Miller, Naughty Lad, John Louis, Milton B., Fireman, Royal Report, Volthorpe and Startler. This race will be one of the drawing cards of the meet, and will be exceeded only by the Kentucky Endurance Stake, the four mile race that is to feature the Louisville card. Secretary Shelley is much pleased with the list of horses that have been named in the stakes, and says there is an abundance of good runners to be present for the meeting. J. T. Williams' great runner, Gov. Gray, will be shipped from Laton for his engagement in the Phoenix Hotel Fall Handicap, his principal stake engagement at Lexington.

An Amusing Incident.

Danny Harrell, the clever shortstop of the Paris team, had two chances in the game with the Hustlers Friday afternoon, accepting neither of them, but through the leniency of the scorekeeper he was not charged with errors. Harrell changed positions with Maxwell, going to the outfield for the game. In the first inning oops in a nearby field got up a rabbit which made tracks across the left garden. The Bourbonite shortstopper attempted to make one of his sensational stops, but the hare made its escape. Again along about the sixth inning another ran out of the cornfield and across the ball yard. Paris was in the field but the game was suspended for few minutes and the members of both clubs started in pursuit. Harrell gave bunny a lively chase across the field but the little animal reached the fence first. The incident afforded much amusement for the spectators.

Record Price for Blue Grass Seed.

The highest price that has ever been realized by local dealers for cleaned blue grass seed was paid this week in Paris when the market reached the unheard of and lofty figure of $3.10 per bushel for fancy cleaned Kentucky blue grass seed, in car load lots. One Paris dealer recently shipped a car of seed for which he received more than $9,000, while another disposed of a car load at $7,449.49.

A single buyer in the county is said to have on hand more than $175,000 worth of Blue Grass seed, which was bought uncleaned at prices ranging from $1 to $1.75.

Bourbon Girl Best Rider at Iowa Fair.

Mrs. Valeria Young Kinnaird, formerly of Clintonville, but now of Des Moines, Iowa, won at the State Fair of Iowa yesterday for the best lady rider over five competitors. She also won seven other ribbons for combined gaited horses, high steppers and other classes, handling the horses of W. A. Graham, of Des Moines.

Mrs. Kinnaird was formerly Miss Young, daughter of Rev. Young, of the Clintonville neighborhood. She will be remembered as one of the best riders ever seen at the Bourbon Fair, having taken the blue tie for the last four years for the best lady rider.

Attacks School Principal.

A severe attack on school principal, Chas. B. Allen, of Sylvania, Ga., is thus told by him. "For more than three years," he writes, "I suffered indescribable torture from rheumatism, liver and stomach trouble and diseased kidneys. All remedies failed till I used Electric Bitters, but four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me completely." Such results are common. Thousands bless them for curing stomach trouble, female complaints, kidney disorders, biliousness, and for new health and vigor. Try them. Only 50c at Oberdorfer's.

STOCK, CROP AND FARM NOTES

—Col. Frank Trimble, of Memphis, Tenn., purchased of Collins Redmon, of North Middletown, for $900, the premium show gelding, Colonel Young, which has won 26 out of 27 premiums at the county fairs in Kentucky, so far. Mr. Trimble will take the gelding out of the show rings after the Memphis horse show for the exclusive use of his adopted daughter, Miss Esther Wilson, as a saddle horse.

The mule market in Paris court day was unusually slow, only a small supply on the market, and they being snapped up at prices ranging from $150 to $200. Bert McClintock and W. G. McClintock were the principal buyers.

Gov. Wilson an Expensive Ornamment.

The wanderings of Gov. Augustus E. Wilson prove embarrassing to his fellow Republicans of the State ticket when they realize that his neglect of duty is daily making votes for the Democrats. The official record shows that he has been absent from Frankfort 239 days in the last three years and a half. He is now on his way to Wequetonsing for an additional thirty days' vacation, and it is safe to predict that before his term expires he will have spent 300 days away from his post of duty. Every day that he is absent the State pays him $20 in addition to the $10 that the Lieutenant Governor draws for acting as Governor. In other words, Governor Wilson will draw from the Treasury $6,000 for services he never rendered, and acting Governor Cox will draw $3,000 additional for doing Wilson's work.

This is the sort of extravagance and neglect that the Republican State Convention endorsed when it announced its approval of Governor Wilson's Administration.

Judge O'Rear says he stands on every plank of that platform, and necessarily he endorses the expensive wanderings of Augustus the 1st, and thank God, the last.

ALL MY PIMPLES GONE

Girl Tells How a Blotchy Skin Was Cleansed By a Simple Wash.

"I was ashamed of my face," writes Miss Minnie Pickard of Altamahaw, N. C. "It was all full of pimples and scars, but after using D. D. D. Prescription I can say that now there is no sign of that Eczema, and that was three years ago."

D. D. D. has become so famous as a cure and instant relief in Eczema and all other serious skin diseases, that its value is sometimes overlooked in clearing up rash, pimples, blackheads, and all other minor forms of skin impurities.

The fact is, that while D. D. D. is so penetrating that it strikes to the very root of Eczema or any other serious trouble, the soothing Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients are so carefully compounded there is no wash for the skin made that can compare with this great household remedy for every kind of skin trouble.

D. D. D. is pleasant to use, perfectly harmless to the most delicate skin, and absolutely reliable. A 25-cent bottle will give you positive proof of the wonderful effectiveness of this great remedy.

Disappointment

WOULDN'T it jar you? When I'm upstairs the doorbell rings downstairs and when I'm downstairs the 'phone rings upstairs," said Evelyn in an agitated tone, as she took down the receiver.

"Hello, is this North 124?" asked a masculine voice.

"Whom do you wish to speak to?" asked Evelyn in her sweetest voice.

"My name is Jack Mitchell," replied the voice. "Is Miss Carter there?"

"This is Miss Carter."

"My cousin, Frank Jocelyn, asked me to call you up as soon as I arrived from New York. He wishes to be remembered to you."

"Oh! Mr. Mitchell, I should be delighted to meet any of Frank's relatives. Are you going to be here for some time?"

"Yes, I expect to locate here, but I'm not acquainted and it's a beastly bore hanging around the hotel. Frank said you knew such a lot of people. Maybe you would introduce me to a few young folks."

"Surely I'd be glad to have you meet some of our friends. If you haven't an engagement for this evening, do come up. You will—that's fine."

After giving explicit directions how to reach her home, Evelyn hung up the receiver, exclaiming to her sister in an excited tone, "Just think, a swell cousin of Frank's is coming to call this evening. I wager he's a rich New Yorker. Doesn't know a soul here. Well, I'm not going to be in a hurry to introduce him around. Don't see any of the girls bringing their out-of-town friends over here. If I make a good impression there may be invitations to the theater and opera galore. Gracious! I'll have to telephone to the cleaner immediately to send my beaded net covered with chiffon waist right away. Then if I get a bid for the opera I can wear my cherry silk voile. Maybe Amy will let me have Miss Kelly, the dressmaker, tomorrow to shorten it. What hat shall I wear?"

"You won't need any hat," answered her sister. "If he's such a swell fellow as you imagine, most likely he'll take a taxi."

"Of course he will. Say, have you got a pair of long, clean, white gloves?"

"Oh, thanks, a thousand times. You're just the best sister. May I take your white lace scarf, too? I'll borrow Jessie's opera coat and have it in the house. One ought to be always prepared if they expect to go out. There's the 'phone again!"

"Yes, this is Miss Carter."

This time Evelyn didn't complain about answering the 'phone.

"You can't get here until 8:15. Oh, that's all right, but come as soon as you can. The sooner the better. Good-bye."

"Oh, Jane! Have we anything home to serve?"

"There is a bottle of ginger ale and some cake," replied Jane. "No one cares for that. Please tell Mary to get some alcohol. I'll make a rarebit in the chafing dish—those little tea aprons look so cute."

"Amy expects me to play bridge this evening. Will you let her know I can't come? We are going to play every Wednesday. Maybe Mr. Mitchell will join us. Will you tell Eva. If she calls up, that I have an engagement for this evening, but don't call me, for she always rubbers so. There's that 'phone again!"

"Yes, Mr. Mitchell, that's the right address. You can't help finding our house, it's right next to the church. How anxious I am I can't tell you to meet you. It seems as if we were old friends, after hearing your voice so often. You feel the same way? Thank you. Good-bye."

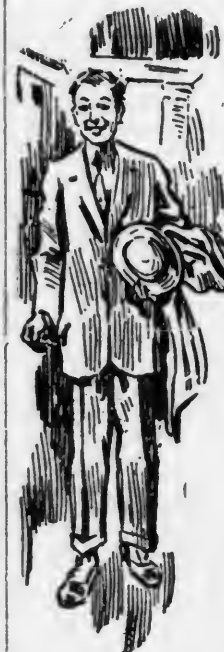

Evelyn looked beautiful in her soft white gown.

"I hope Frank won't be jealous," she said, as she clasped her sister's coral beads around her neck. "If I accept Mr. Mitchell's attentions anyway, he's such an old friend he won't care. Frank's away so much he must expect me to go with other fellows. Anyway, there's nothing serious between us. There's the door-bell. I'll go."

Evelyn opened the door, her face wreathed in a welcoming smile. Her expression changed somewhat as an overgrown youth of about seventeen years greeted her with "How do you do? I'm Jack Mitchell. It was jolly good of you to ask me out."

Evelyn extended a rather limp hand, saying the first thing she could think of to cover her chagrin: "How are you? How much you look like Frank."

Later in the evening she discovered he was only a fourth cousin of Frank's. At any rate, there was no chafing dish supper served that night, because at nine o'clock Evelyn asked to be excused, leaving her sister to entertain Jack while she hastened to the bridge party.

He Greeted Her.

HAYSEED FARMER IS EXTINCT

Our Agriculturists Now Even Have Dining Clubs With Cigars and After-Dinner Speeches.

One of the American characteristics disappearing from the world's stage is the "hayseed." He still inhabits the comic supplement and the imagination of people reared in pent-up flats, but he is nearly extinct in the hamlet, the cross-roads general store and the village postoffice. The daily newspaper, the daily mail, the rural delivery, the telephone and the trolley have nearly annihilated him. Though some gentlemen continue to wear trousers tucked in boot tops, to nibble a straw and to whittle fragrant silvers of white pine, the real "rube" is getting rare. He is now generally found in the cities—the best places for the sale of mining stocks, oil stocks, coffee plantation stocks, rubber-growing company stocks, gilt bricks and other quick ways of breaking into the millionaire class.

One of the recent developments of country life is the organization of farmers' dining clubs. Think of Uncle Josh, by heck, as a clubman! This farmers' dining club idea appears to have originated in Kansas, the parent state of many strange ideas. And this particular idea, as strange ideas commonly do in Kansas, seems to spread. And every one knows, especially a number of standpatters, that when a strange idea begins to spread in Kansas it keeps on spreading.

At these farmers' clubs there is a good dinner—no light lunch, mind you—but a plethora of boiled and baked food—meat, potatoes, cabbage, greens, aye, and perhaps onions, too. After the dinner cigars are served—cigars not made of hemp—none of your Savannah reflectors with long alfalfa filler and jimson weed wrapper—but a real cigar that a man can smoke without waking up the board of health. Shades of Uncle Silas, Uncle Reuben and Uncle Hezekiah and their corn-cob pipes with stems of reed!

After dinner the agricultural clubmen make speeches. This is a human failing. Life would be happier for all men who have to listen if other men did not insist on making speeches, but some men are always indifferent to the comfort of their fellows. When the club meeting begins to break up the farmers rush home in their automobiles, making poor pedestrians jump out of the road and killing chickens on the way.—Washington Star.

Where the Crowd Goes.

Julie—Where are you going this summer, dear?

Marie—Mahoeic beach.

Julie—Why, my dear, there are no eligible men there!

Marie—No, but there will be as soon as it's known I'm around.

He, Too, a Burglar.

All was quiet within the house, and the night was far spent. Thus fortune favored the burglar as he stealthily acquired the plate and valuables and put them in his capacious bag. But oh, the horrible thrill he got when an icy-cold hand grasped his wrist! It was not a ghost he saw when he flashed round with his bull's-eye, but a man with a keen look of sorrow on his dejected countenance.

"Oh, my poor, misguided friend," murmured the intruder sorrowfully. "Would you rob me of my valuables? Think, my man, what you are doing. If you have a wife and child, what would they do if I sent you to prison?" The burglar seemed to be somewhat moved, and he dropped the stolen goods. "Turn from your evil ways, my brother," went on the intruder. "Your secret is safe with me."

Then without a word our friend made a hasty exit by the window. The kind, loving, charitable old man, having quietly lifted the swag on his shoulder, after cramming it to its utmost capacity with useful articles, also took his departure. For behold, he, too, was a burglar.

Humor Amid Danger.

"One of the characteristics of my old comrade, Amos Stillman, Co. A, 23d Mass. volunteers, was bravery in actual fighting service," said the old soldier. "Another characteristic was a sense of humor which stood him in good stead even in the face of danger, and contributed not a little to the gaiety of his comrades."

"At the battle of Cold Harbor, just before making the charge and while under the Confederate fire, our corporal, who was over 6 feet tall and scarcely bigger around than a gun barrel, became excited as the enemy's bullets plowed up the earth about him."

"What kind of a place is this to keep a man in?" he demanded. "Absolutely without protection!"

"He had no more than spoken when private Stillman stuck his ramrod in the ground."

"Here, corporal," said he, "get behind this."—"Youth's Compa"—u.

Happiness Must Be Inborn.

"How can you make a person happy against his will? If you try forever you will not knock any happiness into a person who has not got it in him to be happy.—Arnim.

Then He Went to the Club.

"After I am gone," he complained, "people will begin to notice what I have done." "Well," his wife sadly replied, "if they do it won't take them long."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Tender-Hearted.

Uncle Timothy was a dear old soul, but he had one inevitable failing, says Answers. He always paid his visits at the wrong time.

"It's most awkward of him!" exclaimed the about-to-be hostess, one of these unfortunate occasions. "He has an enormous appetite, and we haven't a thing in the house. You'll have to kill a chicken, John!"

Her spouse looked doubtful. He was very tender-hearted, and the mere notion of wringing a bird's neck or beheading it set his knees wobbling.

"But perhaps, dear, I might manage to shoot one," he suggested; and took his gun and departed on his blood-thirsty errand.

Minutes went by—many minutes. So many, in fact, that his wife went out into the yard to see what had happened.

"I'm afraid it's no good, my dear," called her husband timorously, as she approached. "The poor creature won't get in the way!"

Legal Pleasantries.

The pompous lawyer assumed his most imposing mien. "Gentlemen of the jury," he began, impressively. "I once sat upon the judge's bench in the state of Maine, and—"

"Where was the judge?" interrupted the opposing attorney.—The House-keeper.

Great disorder frequently occurs about the depot in the evening just before the 6:45 train arrives. A number of small boys and some older ones congregate about there, not only making a confusion and noise but grabbing up handfuls of gravel throwing them at one another. Of course the stones scatter and passengers are sometimes annoyed by being struck by them. There is great danger of someone being struck about the eyes or face. It is the business of someone to look into this matter. Such practices should be stopped at once.

That Millersburg is soon to have an electric current is evidenced by the renewed activity along this line following the suit instituted against the Seibert-Herdon Co., of Lexington. Judge Denis Dundon, of Paris, appeared before the City Council of Millersburg, at the regular meeting Wednesday night and assured the members of the Board that the matter had been adjusted and the operation of the plant would begin in a short time. The location of the plant was established several months ago and the wiring of the town was completed. The Council will employ an expert electrician who will go over the lines and put them in good shape before operations begin, and Millersburg is expected to be supplied with an electric current within six weeks.

PARIS WINS THE PENNANT

Take Four Straight of Championship Games from the Winchester Aggregation.

OPPONENTS OUTCLASSED.

McKernan, a Second Winner, Issues Statement Praising the Players.

The Blue Grass League pennant will float over White Park during the season of 1912, as a result of the victory achieved by the Bourbonites on the local lot Sunday afternoon, when they defeated the Hustlers by a score of 9 to 6, making the fourth consecutive game taken from the Coleman pennant aspirants in the championship series.

McKernan took no chances on the result, although from a business standpoint it would have been better for the clubs and players to have the series gone the limit of seven games, and sent his men into the contests imbued with the determination to make short work of the first season champs, which they did by taking a quartet of games without any apparent exertion.

That the Hustlers were no match for the Bourbonites is clearly evident by the scores in the final series. In only one game did they cause them much trouble and that was in the first on the Winchester grounds, which Paris took after a hard fight by the close score of 2 to 1.

In the opening contest Shears and Burden opposed each other and again in the third they met. On each occasion Shears proved his superiority over his opponent and came out with two scalps.

In the first game Burden looked to be returning to his old time form but during base running on the part of Harrell and McKernan with his ever ready hit put the star Hustler hurler on the shelf. In the second contest Scheneberg pitched two of the championship games for Paris and the same success which has crowned his efforts throughout the season with the Paris club was his reward. Although he was wild and gave his opponents more than three times as many runs as Shears, his helpers hit the ball hard and pounded in tally after tally.

McKernan and his men deserve all the credit that is to be bestowed upon them. The series of the first season should have been theirs, but fate decreed otherwise and by a very narrow margin Winchester squeezed into the first position, due to the efforts of Maysville and Lexington, but the second series found Paris a very close contender and before it was two weeks old the locals forged their way to the front and remained a safe distance throughout, yielding the series to no club in the league.

The contest Sunday afternoon was played upon a field resembling a sea of mud. Rain, which began to fall shortly before the game was to have been called, put the grounds in a miserable condition and it was fully an hour before the game could progress. When umpire Kane sent the men to their positions rain was still falling but undaunted by such unfavorable conditions the locals waded in and came out with the long end of the score.

Scheneberg, who has a string of victories almost too long to measure, hurled the last game of the championship series, and while constantly under the care of a physician, except when in the field, he won the deciding contest. He displayed considerable wildness and in one inning fared badly, but thereafter he was on his mettle allowing the visitors to score but one run after the second frame.

The contest was a veritable slugfest. The locals hit Friedley frequently and with telling effect until the fifth round when he settled down, but the purpose of the Bourbonites had been accomplished and with Scheneberg and his teammates working well, they could not overcome the lead acquired in the fourth.

In spite of the fact the grounds were in a miserable condition and fast fielding almost impossible, the game was full of brilliant plays. Chapman was the star in the outfield getting in difficult chances, and leading the team in hitting, getting three safe drives out of five trips to the plate.

Owing to an injury in his hand in the game Saturday, Manager McKernan was out of the game, Maxwell being sent to the second station while Hauser filled the position in the left garden. McKernan directed the movements of his team from the bench, resulting in the victory which meant so much to the club and to the fans of this city.

The efforts of Manager McKernan in retaining the pennant honors for Paris are of exceptional merit. In 1910 with the star aggregation he put the Paris club to the front early in the season and maintained the lead throughout, winning the flag which has graced the pennant pole in White Park since June 20, when it was unfurled to the breezes with appropriate exercises.

The success of the Bourbonites this year is due almost entirely to the efforts of McKernan, who brought together a class of ball players, without an equal in the league and through his capable management. He was secured from the Fayetteville, S. C., club by the Paris management and was very successful from the start. Since he has been in Paris he has made many admirers who share their congratulations with him and his team. At the conclusion of the game Sunday McKernan issued the following statement:

"At the close of the 1911 season I have, in my estimation, the best ball club in the Blue Grass League. All of the players are intelligent with plenty of base ball ability; the great essential which all clubs that are successful must possess, and that is gameness, which is understood by the base ball fan."

"I don't think any other club underwent a season of hardship as great as the one the Paris club had this season, and to continue the second season after losing the first half and again distancing all the other clubs that had been preparing for the second half."

"The championship series with the Winchester club was won by brilliant playing on the part of the Paris club, every man playing as though his life depended on the outcome and with the same confidence that has won so many victories. Each one playing championship ball spelled defeat for the Winchester club and won another pennant for Paris.

"The credit of the grand showing of the club is due to the players, as each one of them played well in their positions. Barnett at first has no equal in the league and possesses more base ball ability than many players in company of a higher class. Harrell at short is a quick thinker and has all the qualities that make a star player. No club can be successful unless they have a good shortstop. Kuhlman is a reliable player, possessed with a spirit that wins. His hitting and fielding was a big factor in the success of the club."

"Catcher Mayer lost no time during his professional career, as he has reached the major league after just one year with the Paris club, which was his first year in professional base ball. The Chicago White Sox have bought this promising player. Maxwell has lived up to his reputation as a hard hitter and a reliable player. I doubt if there is another player in this company better qualified to play any position than he. His playing during the past two seasons at Paris has been high class and I expect to see him advance."

"Chapman in left field is the most improved player in the Blue Grass this season. He has fielded well and has hit the ball when safe drives counted for runs. He also has great coaching abilities which on many occasions have served to worry the opposing players. He is also a quick thinker and a good base runner."

"Goodman in right field has played here three seasons and his playing during the championship season just closed has been of a high class, batting and fielding his position well."

"The pitching staff has been all that could be desired and I look for all the pitchers now on the Paris club to be drafted. Shears has pitched good, consistent ball all season, and displayed wonderful ability especially when victories were needed and his success as a pitcher had much to do with the success of the Paris club. "Cyclone" Jack Scheneberg lived up to his name and his fourteenth victory was the game that assured Paris of the pennant. Scheneberg not only pitched wonderful ball but he fielded and batted like a big leaguer. He is possessed with all the qualities that make a high class pitcher. Hauser is one of the most promising youngsters that has broken into the game. His exhibition of pitching of pitching against the Lexington club during the season just closed was remarkable. Not a hit was made off him in the game of August 3 and but one man reached first base, which was a gift. Much can be expected of him in the future."

"As manager of the Paris Club I desire to pay my respects to the directors of the club as well as the patrons of the game. During my stay in Paris no person could have been treated more fairly than I have been and should I remain in this class league next season I would prefer to return to Paris and manage the Bourbonites. "The patrons of base ball in this city can rest assured that they have the best conducted base ball club in the league. During my connection with the Paris club I have found Mr. Bacon, Mr. Shire and Mr. Paton good base ball men and it is only through their efforts that there is such a high class article of ball played in Paris."

"EDW. MCKERNAN."

SATURDAY.

Outplaying their opponents at every stage Paris won the third game of the Blue Grass League championship from Winchester Saturday afternoon by a score of 8 to 1.

The Bourbonites, playing to old time form and hitting the ball at will showed themselves to be the real champions. Burden, in whom Coleman pinned great faith for the winning of the majority of the games for the Hustlers, had curves just to the liking of the McKernan men and after the first two sessions, was hit freely to all parts of the lot.

On the other hand Shears, who opposed him in the opening game of the series in Winchester last Wednesday, was at his best and while the visitors succeeded in making eight safe drives during the game he was very successful in keeping them well scattered. In only one inning did the opposing batter get the better of the big side-wheeler and that was in the fifth when the Hustlers bunched three safeties, which counted for only one run they were able to get over the rubber during the game.

The locals played a brilliant fielding game, accepting some of the most difficult chances, robbing the visitors of what were apparently safe drives. In the third inning Olson lined over the first base which Barnett pulled down with his gloved hand and Goodman took one from Coleman's bat in the fourth which looked good for three bases. Harrell had only one chance, when in the fifth he knocked down Burden's drive over short which he recovered in time to force a runner at second.

The Bourbonites clouted the ball fiercely in the sixth inning when there came a veritable deluge of two baggers which netted three runs and put a crimp in the chances of the Hustlers on coming out the better in the contest. The score:

"DANIEL BOONE ON THE TRAIL."

"Daniel Boone On the Trail," a story of early pioneer days, comes to the Paris Grand Thursday night. Daniel Boone is of the best known of pioneer historical characters. A cleverly written story of this famous pioneer's brilliant campaign against the Shawnee Indians in his successful attempt of opening up in those troublesome days, that fertile spot now known as Kentucky. A monument now stands at Frankfort, Ky., of Boone, overlooking the beautiful Kentucky River, where Boone lived for several years.

The scenery for this famous drama was painted from photographs taken on the very ground that Boone traversed and are immediately recognized by any one familiar with that part of Kentucky.

In presenting "Daniel Boone On the Trail" Manager Harris has spared nothing in the way of making his production as real as possible. A tribe of Sioux Indians are carried and worked in the many exciting scenes of the play. A pack of Siberian wolves are also carried and used in the snow storm scene.

The burning of the last stick, the coming of darkness, the attack of a pack of hungry wolves and Boone's fight for life makes one of the greatest stage scenes ever presented. The last act shows the surrender of Cornwallis, the meeting of Boone and George Washington, the peace treaty and Washington's message to Boone. This scene never fails to bring cheers from every patriotic American, who bears one spark of patriotism in his breast. The Indians dressed in their native war regalia and the wolves in their cages of captivity are seen on the streets the day of this attraction. Prices 25, 35 and 50 cents. Seats at Mitchell & Blakemore's.

"The Fortune Hunter" at Lexington.

"The Fortune Hunter," Messrs. Cohan and Harris' production of Winchell Smith's delightful comedy of rural life, will be offered for a return engagement at the Lexington Opera House for two nights Monday and Tuesday September 18 and 19, with Tuesday matinee.

Fred Niblo, one of America's best comedians as Nathaniel Duncan who develops an unknown business acumen during the working out of the scheme of fortune hunting heads the cast of competent players.

The old druggist inventor, whose daughter is an unconscious incentive in the building of Nat Duncan's character, is played by Frank Bacon, the veteran actor of character parts. The daughter, Betty, is portrayed by Miss Josephine Cohan of the famous "Four Cohans." The scheming friend, Harry Kellogg, a Wall street broker, is taken by Daniel Hamilton. The rural sheriff, who believes all matrimony is a failure, played by Frank Bouman, the banker "Blinkey" Lockwood, whose fortune is the basis of the scheme played by Noah Berry, and the banker's daughter by Miss Lento Fulwell are the other principal parts of the comedy.

The play relates the experiences in keeping store and making love of a youthful ne'er-do-well who is pushed out into the world to seek his fortune and ends by earning it. Two acts transpire in a drug store—the second showing a run-down old fashioned establishment in a sleepy Pennsylvania town, and the third a smart "Pharmacy" that succeeds as a result of the young hero's enterprise.

"The Fortune Hunter" played record breaking engagements in New York and Chicago and created a new record for popularity never before equaled in the stage history of non-music plays. The play is handsomely staged.

He suffered three severe cuts on the head, one behind each the right and left ear and also on the forehead. Indications are that his skull is fractured at the base. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to Millersburg where he was attended by Dr. W. V. Humfren. His condition is regarded as serious.

Fire At Fair Grounds.

A leak in the gasoline stove in a concession booth beneath the amphitheatre at the fair grounds which caught fire Saturday afternoon, created considerable excitement and a panic was narrowly averted. At the cry of fire the crowd went into wild excitement which was followed by a rush to reach the ground, and it was a miracle none were injured. Director George Michael, taking in the situation at a glance had his hand playing a lively air in an instant, which had the effect of restoring quiet, and probably prevented a serious disaster. No damage was done by the fire, but Ed Rassenfoss was burned on the hands while removing the gasoline tank from the stove, while Bill Miller, colored, suffered severe burns on one arm, none of which were serious.

Mr. and Mrs. Ulie Howard, his parents, who had been spending the week of the fair with Mr. and Mrs. Buckner Woodford, Jr., accompanied him. Master Howard is an ardent base ball fan and was a regular attendant at the games played here by the Paris team. He is quite an admirer of Manager McKennan as well as the other members of the club, and says if there is anything in the talk of Covington, his home town, entering the Blue Grass League, he will still be a "booster" for Paris and that he would "rather be McKennan than President Taft." Such loyalty is seldom seen in a boy of his age.

Russell Wouldn't Come Across.

When President Bacon sent a certified check for $1,000 to Joe Nolan, Sporting Editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer last week as his part of the agreement for the series of five games between Maysville and Paris for that amount on the side, President Russell, of Maysville, kicked over the traces and made a noise like he had cold feet. President Bacon took Russell to be a man that would back up his judgment, and when the latter made the proposition Mr. Bacon immediately posted his part of the bet. Russell later made a big noise through the columns of the Enquirer that the Paris president had taken water, which prompted Mr. Bacon to draw the money posted here and send it to Nolan.

Bacon yesterday received a telegram from Russell stating he would not be able to arrange for the series owing to the fact it would be impossible to hold his team together for that length of time. It is clearly evident that the Maysville president was only bluffing and it gives the Paris fans a great deal of pleasure to know that Bacon called his bluff.

FREE SAMPLE OF LAXATIVE CURED HIS CONSTIPATION

When a person has become discouraged through years of failure to find a cure, and finally, perhaps, gives up trying, it is small wonder that he becomes skeptical. And yet, to all who have constipation, we would say, "Try just one thing more."

We wish you would try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a laxative tonic that has been used for a generation. Thousands are using it; surely some of your friends among the number. You can buy it of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, but better still, send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell for a free sample bottle. He will send you enough to convince you of its merits, and then if you like it you can buy it of your druggist. Mr. J. J. Petty of Unionville, Mo., Mr. George W. Zimmerman of Harrisburg, Pa., and many others of both sexes and in all parts of the country first used a sample bottle and now have it regularly in the house.

You will learn to do away with salts, waters and cathartics for these are but temporary reliefs while Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is guaranteed to cure permanently. It will train your stomach and bowel muscles so that they will do their work again naturally without outside aid. Cast aside your skepticism and try Syrup Pepsin.

For the free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 402 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

Trying for a Prize

"It isn't worth the trouble," declared Jessie, throwing her music roll upon the piano and sinking into a chair. "It really isn't!"

"What?" asked her friend in surprise.

"This medal getting! This striving after fame! This mad rush after glory!" groaned Jessie with a melancholy wave of her hand. "I'll never do it again, Mary. Never!"

"That's what you said last time." "I know it, but I mean it now. Look at me—just look at me, will you?"

"You certainly do look worn out," said Mary. "But didn't you win the first prize?"

"First prize!" cried her friend. "I didn't win any! That's just the trouble. I didn't come within half a mile of winning. And the time I've spent and the agony I've endured! When I think of that—well, it's a wonder I've not turned to stone. That's what I told father last night when he was faying."

"Raving!"

"Yes. You see he had promised me a diamond ring if I distinguished myself, as he termed it, and when I told him that I came out seventeenth from the highest and then added that I needed a trip abroad to recuperate after my exertions, he said he would give me a place to work in his office so that I wouldn't waste any more time on such tommy-rot as music."

"But what did your mother say?"

"Nothing. She was so busy packing and getting ready to go to a sanitarium that she couldn't sympathize with me. She'll all worn out doing housework. You see, our maid left and I've been so busy practicing that I haven't had time to help her for weeks."

"But your brother—didn't he have a word of comfort for you?"

"I haven't seen him yet. He's coming home tonight. He's been boarding with the Claytons since April. He said he couldn't stand the sound of that second movement in my piece and if he heard it any more he would go mad. I used to shut all the doors, but it didn't seem to do any good. The chromatics would get through somehow, so he said he would stay with the Claytons until the contest was over."

"But George—surely he tried to cheer you up?"

"Cheer me up!" cried Jessie, tearfully. "He was a brute. Why, when I told him I had lost the medal, what do you suppose he said?"

"What?"

"He said, 'That's very strange after all those evenings you devoted to practice.' You see, whenever he wanted to call, I'd tell him he would have to wait until the examinations were over. And what do you suppose he's doing now?"

"What?"

"Taking Nan Perkers everywhere. He never would look at her before."

"Never mind," consoled Mary. "There are other Georges."

"And everybody blames me because I didn't get the prize!" lamented Jessie. "That's what hurts. For it wasn't my fault at all. It was my nervous temperament. You see, we were numbered. I was No. 3, and when I came into the room to play—we played before the jury of man teachers, you know—I couldn't see a piano at first, although I knew there were two in the room. At last my teacher came to my rescue and led me up to one of them, and I started off."

"I got along pretty well until I saw one of the men put a pencil to his lips. Somehow or other that pencil fascinated me. It was a long, yellow one and had a worn-out eraser on one end. It got on my nerves. I wanted to shriek, 'Put it down! Put it down!' only my lips were so dry that I could not make a sound."

"After a while I felt a tap on my shoulder and, looking up, saw my teacher. 'That's all,' he said. 'You've finished.' 'And he never put it down,' I said. Then I wondered why they looked so strangely at me."

"At last I found myself outside the door and then I sat down and waited. I saw another girl, No. 38, go in, and I noticed that she looked rather pale. 'I wonder if she'll see that pencil,' I thought. But after a while she came out again, paler than ever, but perfectly composed and not in the least frightened."

"How did you ever do it?" I gasped. "She looked at me and smiled."

"Dope," she said. "Dope!" I repeated stupidly. Then she told me. It seems that she took three doses of some sort of powder before going into the examination room. Ordinarily the doses would have put a strong man to sleep, but taken in a moment of excitement they merely calmed the nerves."

"Well, the next day I heard that she had won one of the medals, so I went home and told the family."

"What did they say?" asked Mary.

"They laughed at me, and when I said that next year I was going to take dope and try for a prize, father said, 'Oh, no! The next time you try for a prize, the whole family will take dope.'"

LIQUID CURES ECZEMA WHERE SALVE FAILS

In regard to skin diseases medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT. A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D. D. D. Prescription, penetrates to the disease germs and destroys it, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A 25-cent trial bottle will start the cure, and give you instant relief.

A Fierce Night Alarm.

is the hoarse, startling cough of a child, suddenly attacked by croup. Often it aroused Lewis Chamblin, of Manchester, O., [R. R. No. 2] for their four children were greatly subject to the croup. "Sometimes in severe attacks," he wrote "we were afraid they would die, but since we proved what a certain remedy Dr. King's New Discovery is, we have no fear. ## BEATTIE IS GUILTY; TO DIE IN NOVEMBER.

IS QUICKLY SENTENCED

Dramatic Scenes Enacted in Backwoods Courthouse.

PRISONER GREATLY MOVED

Judge Orders Jury to Take Walk Before Beginning Deliberation In One of Virginia's Most Noted Murder Trials.

Chesterfield C. H., Va., Sept. 11.—Three minutes less than an hour the jury deliberated and then after first ballot they filed into the little court room and pronounced Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., guilty of the murder of his wife, Louise Owen Beattie, as charged in the indictment. Murder in the first degree was what the indictment charges. After the verdict had been read, Judge Watson sentenced the young man to be removed to the state penitentiary on Oregon Hill, Richmond, and on Friday, the 24th day of November, between sunrise and sunset, that his life be taken in the manner prescribed by law. The Virginia law prescribes the electric chair.

Jury Given Short Walk.

When Louis O. Wendenburg, chief commonwealth prosecutor, had finished his summing up nothing remained to be done then but for the jury to retire to the little juryroom over the courtroom and take with them the fate of the white-faced youth who had sat in an unchanged position during the two and a half hours that the lawyers had been building up, bit by bit, the incriminating evidence that was to weigh against him in the minds of the 12 Chesterfield farmers in their box.

HENRY C. BEATTIE, JR.

Young Virginian Found Guilty of Killing Wife.

Judge Watson whispered for a minute to his clerk and then he directed that Sheriff Gill take the jury for a stroll around the courthouse green. "Let them get a little exercise. Mr. Sheriff," the court directed, "before they retire to the juryroom to deliberate upon this important matter."

Judge Watson had whispered to Clerk Cogbill that he did not want to have the jury retire immediately upon the closing of the prosecutor's speech. If by chance they should return a quick verdict their action might appear to be too precipitate and possibly influenced by the passionate peroration that had concluded Wendenburg's speech.

Fifty-seven minutes passed. Then above the low hum of conversation in the still crowded courtroom, three knocks on the floor of the room overhead sounded—three muffled knocks.

"The jury has knocked," the excited whisper spread through the courtroom. A deputy ran down stairs from the cubbyhole up under the eaves, where the 12 men sat behind a locked door, and told Sheriff Gill that the jury had knocked. Back in 1754, when the old courthouse was built, that custom was established. A jury knocked when it had reached its decision.

Then Judge Watson, who had been smoking a cigar out under the gathering shadows beneath the great white oak, walked in and took his seat on the bench. Those spectators who had dared to leave the courtroom, believing that the jury would be out far into the night, scrambled rantically for their places, which were already filled. A deputy passed around and lit four kerosene lamps in their brackets and one on the judge's desk.

Silence Prevailed.

For many long minutes there was not a sound in the packed room. A few benches away from the bar where the lawyers sat were close packed rows of faces all streaked and shadowed fantastically in the lamplight.

Henry Beattie sat with his hands folded on the table before him, perfectly immobile, his face toward the judge's seat. It was sharpened in outline and the peculiar feline expression about the eyes was heightened by the wideness of the pupils, and the thin, in-drawn lines that stretched straight from the bridge of the nose. Excitement glittered in his eyes. The mouth was drawn in so that only a slight dark smudge marked its position.

Sheriff Gill's pugnacious chin whiskers showed over the head of the nethermost men who blocked the aisle to the stairs; the man was pushed aside and then the sheriff marshaled his 12 men through the pack and to their seats over in the corner behind the judge's desk.

Judge Watson instructed the clerk to call the roll of the jury. He did so. Then, "Mr. Beattie, stand up," the court directed, and Beattie arose in his place. He rested one hand on his hip, arm akimbo, and the other hand he put, fist clenched, on the table before him. The lamp over his head showed that all the blood had fled from those tightened knuckles, but in the face not a quiver, and the eyes were steady.

"Gentlemen of the jury, look upon the prisoner. Prisoner, look upon the jury," the clerk chanted in the old formula of dread. Then, "Gentlemen of the jury, have you reached a verdict?" the clerk asked.

A single muffled answer. "Yes."

"What is that verdict?" "Guilty—guilty—guilty—guilty."

No foreman spoke, but all of the 12, nearly in unison. The succession of their short chopped iterations smote the silence ponderously.

At that very second a puff of wind from the nearby windows smote the flame in the lamp on the judge's desk. The flame elongated into a streaky flare, then went out. Out in the horse shed by the courthouse green a mule dreaming of his straw bed and long delayed oats raised his voice into a quivering scream that rasped and rasped, then was still.

W. L. Burgess, who was nearest to the judge, handed up the folded indictment which had been taken with the jury into the juryroom. Across the back of it was written the words, "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty as charged in the indictment."

Jury Sent Back.

The jury having failed to indicate the degree of murder they were sent back to their room. The judge told Beattie's counsel to have him sent down. When the son took his seat, he looked not at his father nor at his counsel. The father sat with eyes tight shut. His hand slipped over the back of the prisoner's chair and the fingers wavered as if undecided, whether to touch the back of the adjudged murderer. They did not.

The jury was away many minutes, and when the juryman filed back into their places the clerk ordered the prisoner to stand and once more demanded of the jury if they had reached a verdict. This time the jury handed up their finding of "guilty" of murder in the first degree, as charged in the indictment.

Judge Watson lifted his eyes from his desk and saw Beattie still standing, one arm akimbo, and the white face all puckered in the lamp's shadow.

"Sit down, Mr. Beattie," he said. Then he turned to the jury and thanked them for the faithful service of three weeks that they had rendered to the county. He dismissed the jury with a wave of his hand, but still they kept their seats.

Motion Overruled.

Attorneys for the defense then moved that the verdict be set aside as contrary to law and the evidence, which was promptly overruled by the court. A motion for a stay of execution was also overruled and Judge Watson, after a lengthy address to the prisoner, sentenced him in the following language:

"The judgment of this court is that you be transferred to the state penitentiary and that between sunrise and sunset on Friday, Nov. 24, your life be taken in the manner prescribed by law; and may God have mercy on your soul, sir."

The judge finished, Beattie still faced him with his cat-like eyes unwinking. When the last words fell from Judge Watson's lips the prisoner bowed stiffly, as if he would say in tenderloin slang, "I get you, Judge."

When Jailor Bill Cogbill, who had been standing very close to the prisoner during all these proceedings, stepped forward and tapped Beattie on the shoulder. He arose mechanically, and with his father following at his elbow, he walked through the door and down the little path to the jail behind the courthouse. Once out on the ground the father's arm slipped around the waist of the condemned murderer and words were whispered into his ear.

Good Record for Odd Fellow.

If the following be correct, and it should be, coming as it does from "The Kentucky Odd Fellows," it speaks mighty well for the Odd Fellows' order in Adams county, Ohio, and whatever is true of the order in that county is evidently true everywhere. "The Order of Odd Fellows has a right to feel proud of their organization, since it has been learned that out of 856 members in Adams county polling 5,400 votes, nearly 2,100 of whom are disfranchised, not a single Odd Fellow was indicted for selling his vote. This fact has been revealed by Grand Master Hoffman who has just finished making an investigation."

There were sixty in the drove, and they were spread out across the street at that point, when one of the city cars, which was running from the fair grounds into town, ran into them.
